The APSS Fellows Program is an intensive, undergraduate leadership development fellowship designed to cultivate student leaders who have an understanding of Asian and Pacific Islander Americans and our role in the larger global community and to empower them to be informed and engaged citizens. By engaging the intercultural community at Loyola Marymount University in the issues, culture, and experiences of Asian and Pacific Islanders through advocacy, community building, educational programs, empowerment, resources, and the development of leaders, APSS Fellows develop essential leadership, teamwork, public speaking, community building, public relations, marketing, research, event production and advocacy skills to become transformational leaders in the Asian Pacific American community and beyond.

APSS Fellows Application Short Questions

1. Why are you interested in becoming an APSS Fellow?

2. Describe your experience with Asian American and/or Pacific Islanders.

3. What are some issues or concerns facing young Asian Pacific Americans today?

4. Describe your experience with black, Latino, and/or white students at your high school? Feel free to focus on any group(s) which impacted your high school experience.

5. What does interculturalism mean to you?

6. During your next 4 years as a student at Loyola Marymount University, what do you have on your to-do list?

7. What special skills/perspective/knowledge would you bring to the APSS Team?

8. As an APSS Fellow you will have the opportunity to help plan events. What ideas do have for an APSS program or event that you would like to plan to help engage LMU's intercultural community in Asian Pacific America?

9. Asian Pacific Americans are occasionally asked, "What are you?" What do you say when asked this question? What do you think, but don't say? And if you haven't answered this already, how do you define yourself as an Asian American or Pacific Islander? What has it been like to walk in your shoes as an Asian Pacific American?

10. Ask yourself a question (that will demonstrate why we might want to bring you on to join the 2012-2013 APSS Fellows). Let us know what the question is and answer it.
