

The Bioethics Institute of Loyola Marymount University Presents

The 2009 Annual Bioethics Institute Lecture “Who is Dead and Eligible to Donate Organs?”

By: James DuBois, PhD, DSc,
Mäder Professor of Health Care Ethics, Department
Chair & Center Director, Saint Louis University

Professor DuBois also co-directs the Bander Center for Medical Business Ethics and directs the Center for Clinical Research Ethics at Washington University’s Institute for Clinical and Translational Science. He holds secondary appointments in the Departments of Medicine and Community Health at St. Louis University. He completed his PhD in philosophy at the International Academy of Philosophy in Liechtenstein and his DSc in psychology at the University of Vienna. His research interests currently include research ethics in mental health, ethics in organ transplantation, moral development and education, and empirical research on ethical issues. He has served on numerous national committees on organ transplantation, including: the Institute of Medicine’s committee on increasing rates of organ donation and the Canadian Council for Donation and Transplantation’s Forum on Donation after Cardiac Death. In the area of research ethics, he serves on the National Institute of Drug Abuse Data Safety Monitoring Board and is a regular scientific reviewer for NIH programs that address research ethics. He has published numerous articles and books in the field of bioethics, including his recent Ethical Research in Mental Health (New York: Oxford University Press, 2007).

Co-sponsored by:
The Austin & Ann O’Malley Chair in Bioethics

SEPTEMBER 16, 2009
7:30 – 9:00 P.M.
AHMANSON AUDITORIUM, (UNIVERSITY HALL 1000)
Free Admission & Parking
(Park in University Hall P2 or P3)

LMU|LA
The Bioethics Institute